The Occident Grower makes her landing at Oregon City at what is known as the Caufield landing.

The loss by fire in Salem in the half year ending Dec 31, 1872, amounted to the small sum of $600.

The snow is reported to be four feet deep on the Coast Range of mountains between here and Tillamook.

The Temperance Ballard Hall at Albany has been opened, and Bros Brown and Vancleave are both patrons.

C G. Curl, clerk of the Supreme Court of this State, is again confined to his room with rheumatism, and is suffering intensely.

P. Pillmore, sent to the penitentiary nine years ago from Douglas county, for stealing a horse, has been pardoned. His full term was ten years.

The Clackamas County Commissioners talk of building two large bridges this summer one across the Clackamas river and one across the Molalla river.

The Grower was welcomed enthusiastically at every point on the Wallamut river last week, and so long as her owners preserve their accommodating spirit and low tariff everything will be lively.

On Tuesday, Miss Hardman, of Albany, stepped upon a garden rake which happened to be lying in front of the door, teeth up, running one of the iron teeth clear through her right foot, making a painful if not dangerous wound.

The fire department of Salem numbers one hundred and fifty-nine men. They have two engines, a hook and ladder carriage and 1,300 feet of hose in good order, and the small losses sustained there would indicate their efficiency.

While Mr. Wilde, an Oregon City gunsmith, was handling a pistol last Wednesday, it accidentally went off and shot a young man named Peter Rinderson through the arm, just above the wrist, passing through the arm, but touching no bones.

Ambrose Fields, an old pioneer, and the father of a large family of children, grown up in Oregon City and Clackamas county, died at his residence near that place last Wednesday. Mr. Fields was in the 83d year of his age. Peace to his ashes.

The Courier wants an explanation of the following: "Mount Hood is in plain view of Portland, and is apparently due east from that city. And this same snow capped monster mound is also plainly visible from Main street in McMinnville, and seems nearly due east of that point also, notwithstanding that that burg is nearly 30 miles south of Portland.

The Albany Register says: B Goldsmith, President of the W. R. T. Co, proposes to furnish free passes to the Delegates elect to Farmers' State Convention, which convenes at Salem on the 10th of next month. All delegates from Linn wishing to avail themselves of this liberal offer, should send their names to C. P. Burkhart, Albany, immediately, that the passes may be properly filled out. The Grower will leave Albany for Salem early on the morning of April 10th.

The Register does up a court scene: Indian Frank came in smiling awkwardly, as if he felt bashful in being brought into so much company. He looked quite young, not over eighteen or twenty, we should say, is of low stature ("pony build") broad faced, like all of our Oregon Indians, and appeared well fed. The indictment against him was read by the District Attorney, but Frank couldn't take it in, in English, (waite oumtux Boston wa-wa,) and it devolved upon Judge Chenoweth, the Chief of the Corvallisites, to dose it to him in the soft and melodious jargon of the Chinook,—which, by the way, the Judge speaks with a fluency becoming a great linguist.

The Salem Statesman says: "There is likely to be fun on the river till it is definitely settled which is the faster boat, the Alice or the Grower. It was understood here that there would be a trial of speed up on Thursday, and a good many people were on the qui vive to see how it would result. We are not informed, however, what efforts were made by either steamer to test their relative speed. The Alice made the best time by an hour or more. The Grower left the locks at half past eight A. M., stopped at all way landings, and arrived here at five P. M., with thirty-three passengers. She left for Corvallis after a short stay. The Alice left the Oregon City Basin at 9:05 A M., and arrived here a few minutes after the Grower. She brought fifteen passengers and ten tons through freight, and took eight tons from here for Corvallis. She left the wharf here about a minute and a half behind the Grower. They were both making the water fly when they passed out of sight."

LETTER FROM HILLSBORO.

HILLSBORO, March 28, 1873.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

There has been filed for record in the County Clerk's office in Washington county during the month of March, 49 deeds three patents and nine mortgages.

The County Treasurer's report to the State Board shows that there has been collected in interest on the irreducible school fund for the year, $1,017 57 coin and $286 58 currency. In all cases, with a few exceptions, parties having borrowed school money have come forward and settled the interest promptly. There is, however, one individual who has drawn largely on this fund for land speculations, of the precious intumbent, who has almost entirely failed and still fails and neglects to pay the lawful interest after having had almost unlimited sway of the fund. The most stringent prosecutions should be instituted to force a payment of the interest due. Simply because he is a "landed cuss" is no reason he should be favored more than others.

The present Road Supervisor for Hillsboro Road District has been doing some good work on the roads, and good roads in that section may be looked for, provided, however, said Supervisor does not lose his grip.

A large number of persons attended the sale of the property of Wm E Smith, living three and one-half miles north of Hillsboro. Mr. Smith leaves for the East in a short time.

The Holladay crowd in Hillsboro, ever since the "organ" has announced that a station will be put in at Hillsboro, are jubilating, crowing and shaking each other by the hand, and declaring themselves to be trumps. Now a station is some thing that all would like to see, and would be very glad to get; but if we don't miss our guess, the same cooks that crowed once before and slunk back and hid themselves from view, will undergo the same humiliating process, after they have been made to serve a purpose. And in saying this, it is not to be understood that any in the place do not desire these privileges, on the contrary, they would be most heartily welcomed by all, but depend on it, there is a sell somewhere.

A Sacramento lawyer remarked to the court "It is my candid opinion Judge that you are an old fool." The Judge allowed his mildly beaming eye to fall upon the lawyer a brief moment, then in a voice husky with suppressed tobacco juice and emotion, said: "It is my candid opinion that you are fined $100."

"Speculator in other people's property" is a Colorado name for thief, but they don't deal so leniently with the subject as with the name. A man who "speculated in other people's horses," figured conspicuously in a popular necktie party there a few days ago.

THE TERRITORIES.

The Waldron Troupe were to open out at Olympia on Thursday evening.

The Puget Sound District has had four collectors of customs in 11 months.

The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad intend building south from Fort Lyon this summer.

A new postoffice has been established in Whatcom county, W T., called Lynden, and H. A. Judson appointed to its charge.

Rev. E P. Hammond, the great revivalist, is now in Denver, stirring up the sinners at a tremendous rate. He finds plenty of material.

Capt. Stevens, of the bark Vellette, who has for eleven years commanded vessels sailing from the Sound, visited Olympia on Tuesday last for the first time.

A fight occurred between the Arapahoes and Apaches on the Dry Cimarron a few days ago, and twenty four of the latter were sent where there are no Peace Commissioners.

A stay of proceedings has been granted in the case of Toulsecat Konsler, a half breed sentenced to hang at the last term of Court at Cheyenne. The matter now goes over to the July term of the Supreme Court.

A schoolmaster at Colorado City, named Oder, fired a shot at his lady love a few days ago and missed her. He then fired another at his rival, missing him also. Being disgusted with his bad marksmanship in firing at other people, he tried his revolver on his own foolish brain with fatal effect.

A young man named William Druitt, had the middle and third fingers of his left hand badly crushed or jammed yesterday, in Seattle, by getting them caught between the iron rollers of a cracker machine. The rollers were only three-sixteenths of an inch apart, and the hand was drawn in until the pressure stopped the machine.

The Denver News has this short paragraph on unpunished murderers: "Mrs. Hayman, leaning on the gate post of John Hughes, weeping for her murdered son; and his son, the murderer, at large in the community—such was the scene witnessed yesterday by hundreds, perhaps thousands of citizens. It is too pitiable to write about.

The Echo learns that Dr. Walker, formerly of Olympia, committed suicide recently, in New Haven. He became deranged from too close confinement to his practice and hard study. The same paper is also informed that Dr. F. M. Lamper, well known on the Sound, died suddenly in Chenoa, Illinois, on the 27th of February, from an overdose of chloral.

A Mrs. Millsap, whose husband is in the Denver jail for robbery, took him a roast chicken in which were concealed a knife, a loaded pistol and a bank note for $50, together with a letter directing the prisoner where to look for further supplies when he should escape. The "stuffing" was taken out of that chicken before Mr. Millsap got it, and Mrs. Millsap was "stuffed" into the jail.

On the 15th inst., at Georgetown, Colorado, a doctor named Shea got into a quarrel with a woman of reputed loose character named Mollie Dean, with whom it appears he had been infatuated, and after considerable crimination and recrimination, he shot the woman and instantly killed her. Witnessing the appalling deed he had committed, Shea, immediately after the death of Miss Dean, placed his weapon to his own breast, fired, and fell dead.

A party of Prescott diamond hunters traveled about two thousand miles in going from Prescott to Fort Defiance, thence north to San Juan river, up that stream to the mouth of the Rio de las Animas, up that river till at the gap in the Lata mountains they were turned back by the Utes. The expedition has made one point certain—that there is gold to be found everywhere on the San Juan river and its tributaries, with plenty of water and a fine show for hydraulic operations.

Mr. D. G. Scouten has given up the Longmont, Wyoming, Press. He couldn't stand the pressure any longer. For six months he ran that paper, built fires, wrote editorials, swept his office, gathered locals, carried water, made up the forms, carried the papers, "selected and wrote up the miscellaneous matter," "did the job work" set up type, did the press work, made up the mail and—did a few extra chores at home. He wisely came to the conclusion that "the mental and physical strain was terrible," and he weakened.

The Masonic Grand Lodge of Idaho, at its last session, passed resolutions declaring that "the keeping of saloons for the sale of spirituous liquors or gaming purposes is a Masonic offence, and such as are guilty of such unmasonic conduct shall be subject to admonition, reprimand, suspension, and expulsion; and Masters, at their peril, must see that this vice against Masonry no longer finds a hiding place among Masons, and it is strictly forbidden hereafter for Masons in the jurisdiction to engage in the business. The Masons now engaged in the business shall have until the first day of October, 1873, to close out their business of saloon keeping, and Masons neglecting or refusing to do so shall be proceeded against by the subordinate Lodge under whose jurisdiction they reside, and dealt with according to the spirit of the resolution."

An Olympia paper says Abbott, the absconding debtor, can be traced wherever he goes "by a black streak in the atmosphere, caused by his bombast, improbable stories, and barefaced lies. The general supposition in this city is that he has gone back to the vicinity of Brattleboro, Vermont, and it would be well enough for our eastern friends to be on the lookout for him. This country is well rid of him, and the general wish is that he may never return. In view of the late unceremonious leave taking of the scallawags Stone and Abbott, the former from Seattle, and the latter from this city, we hope we shall have no more such scandalous affairs to chronicle, as such exposures do not reflect any credit upon the good citizens of the Territory. A moral can also be drawn from these recent runaways, and that is for the married ladies and business partners not to allow their husbands and business associates to start for San Francisco to purchase goods, carrying all the money they can get hold of with them, as it is a great temptation for them not to return as long as they have plenty of funds to revel in the gayeties of city life and enjoy extended trips east."

The Puget Sound Courier of the 26th inst. says: About six weeks ago Solon B. Abbott, an individual well known on Puget Sound, and in portions of California and Oregon, started from this city for San Francisco, ostensibly for the purpose of laying in a stock of goods. For about a year past this man Abbott has been engaged in the furniture business in company with J. C. Horr, under the firm name of Abbott & Horr, their place of business being on Main street, in this city. When he started from here, he had on his person in the neighborhood of six thousand five hundred dollars in coin and drafts, which was to be used in the purchase of goods and paying the indebtedness of the firm. He arrived safely in San Francisco, and visited a number of the merchants in that city with which he had been doing business, made a few small purchases, but took good care not to settle any outstanding liabilities. He wrote several letters to his wife and partner in this place, was frequently seen in San Francisco up to the 10th instant, when he mysteriously disappeared from that city, and has not since been heard from. The creditors of the firm in San Francisco, becoming uneasy about their pay, telegraphed to this city for information in regard to how matters stood, and finding that nothing was known here as to his whereabouts, were not slow in coming to the conclusion that Abbott had fled the country, and there is no doubt of this in the minds of the inhabitants of Olympia.

EASTERN DATES TO MARCH 29

WASHINGTON CITY.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—The President and family left to-night for New York. It is absent two or three days.

A special from Washington says that up to February 28th over three hundred of the National Banks were below the legal reserve.

Death of Admiral Montgomery.

The Navy Department announces the death of Rear Admiral John B. Montgomery, at Carlisle, Pennsylvania, on the 26th inst. He entered the navy in 1812, and was on the retired list at the time of his death. He was midshipman on the flag ship Niagara in the victory of Lake Erie.

Don't Want to Investigate.

NEW YORK, March 27.—The Tribune's Washington special to-day gives a remarkable statement, apparently intended to create the impression that the Central Pacific Railroad Company's attorneys, instead of stimulating the charges of bribery in connection with Casserly's election, as was heretofore supposed, have in fact labored to stop the charges, to that effect which appeared in the Washington Republican. The motive inferred from this would seem to be the fear of an investigation into the relations between the Central Pacific Company and Congress, which instead of damaging Casserly would destroy those Senators and Representatives whose constant devotion to the monopoly's interest is notorious.

The Cabinet.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—All the members of the Cabinet were present at a meeting to-day, except Cresswell. Belknap will leave for the West to-night.

EASTERN STATES.

Boss Tweed Resigns.

ALBANY, March 27.—Tweed having resigned his seat in the Senate, the committee have been discharged from further investigation into his case.

Garfield will Obey Vox Populi.

NEW YORK, March 27.—A New York Tribune special gives a rumor that Gen. Garfield is about to resign his seat in Congress to go into business.

The Prospective Strike.

It is believed there will be a general strike of the trades in this city soon. The present trouble comes chiefly from masons and gas-men. The Germans are opposed to the strike, and the great mass of the mechanics seem adverse to the movement.

To be Hanged.

LOUISVILLE, March 27.—Thos. Smith will be hanged here on Friday for the murder of Thos. Braden.

Death of Senator Dixon.

HARTFORD, Conn., March 27.—Hon. James Dixon, U. S. Senator from 1857 to 1869 died at his residence in this city this afternoon of heart disease, aged 68.

Banking House Suspended.

NEW HAVEN, March 27.—The suspension of the banking house of E. G. Scranton & Co. in this city created quite a stir. The liabilities of the firm are placed at $450,000. Scranton, the manager, says the firm hold assets sufficient to pay all depositors.

The Summer Resolutions.

BOSTON, March 27.—The Massachusetts Senate to-day rejected all amendments and accepted by a vote of 27 to 40 the adverse report of its committee on the petition of J G Whittier and others for annulling or rescinding the Summer resolutions passed at the last session. The House has already done the same thing, so the matter is finally settled.

The Centennial Appropriation.

PHILADELPHIA, March 27.—Gov. Hartranft has signed the bill appropriating one million dollars for the Centennial Celebration.

The Prospect for a Strike.

NEW YORK, March 28.—Employers and journeymen carpenters held a meeting last evening, but it is understood that no agreement was arrived at in the eight hour question. A final meeting takes place Thursday next. The gas men will meet on Monday. If the Companies then refuse to return to the eight-hour system, and demand additional work, a strike will take place on the Monday following. The boss plasterers of Brooklyn last evening decided that a day of eight hours work. If refused, a strike will follow.

The Brooklyn Murder Mystery.

NEW YORK, March 28.—A gentleman residing in the vicinity of the murdered man Goodrich has made a voluntary statement to the effect that he has frequently observed a woman in Goodrich's house, and that she and Goodrich acted as man and wife. When the woman now in custody was questioned yesterday she was very evasive. Circumstantial evidence is strong against her. It is now ascertained that the woman in custody on suspicion of murdering Goodrich is named Myers. She went under the name of Kate Stoddard.

Execution at Alexandria.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., March 28.—Chas Manley, colored, convicted of the murder of an old white man named Monroe, in July last, was hanged at noon to-day, in the presence of a large concourse of people. The roofs of houses in the vicinity, steeples, and all prominent buildings, were crowded. The drop fell at 21 minutes past 1 o'cl

SATURDAY MORNING MARCH 29 1873

The Way the Jobs Got Through

The Independent editor flippantly says that all the so-called jobs were agreed to in a conference committee and in consequence never were much fully considered by both branches of Congress. But it is the modern way of putting through such appropriations as that will not bear the light much upon examination. If it fail this last day or two of the session and it is introduced as an amendment to the most important appropriation bills by this means a useful measure gets passing notice. The necessity for the passage of the appropriation bill is urgent. The keeping in motion of the machinery of government depends upon its passage. There is little time for discussion, and members interested in various jobs will see that discussion is prevented as far as possible. The doubtful measure having thus secured a toothold goes to a committee of conference, whence it comes back to both houses, and, in the hurry and confusion of the closing hours, is rushed through, the alternative being to reject the appropriation bill as a whole.

In this manner was the bill smuggled through the last Congress to authorize Congressmen and Senators to appropriate to their own use thousands of dollars of the public moneys of the nation. A few members in both branches did lift up their voices nobly against the unrighteous act, but the fate of other important matters seemed to be so involved in that of the swindle that it must through, receiving doubtless many votes which it never could have got had it stood alone as a separate bill.

We do not pretend to know how much truth there is in the Independent's remark that a number of other frauds of this nature were enacted by the last Congress just at the heel of the session, but if the great salary swindle could go through, we can scarcely conceive of a measure that might not. Certainly the restraint of a sense of decency, to mention no higher sense, would have stopped the progress of that measure, if it could be relied upon to save the national treasury from any imaginable outrage.

Chivalry on a Strike

Strikes in this country among operatives appear to be reduced to a science. The strikes announced beforehand, the day and time agreed upon for the strike, and then follows the announcement with the promptitude of clock work, unless the demand which the strike is designed to enforce, is complied with before the time set for the commencement of hostilities. This is better, if strikes must come, than the method of knocking off without notice, inasmuch as it opens the way for accommodation of the matter before the actual suspension of business. If the employers contemplate yielding to the demands of the operatives, they can notify the latter of that fact, before the strike has commenced, and thus prevent the loss of time to themselves and the operatives which would be involved in an actual strike, and if on the other hand they resolve not to yield, the announcement of that conclusion brings negotiations to an end, the operatives feel at liberty to seek employment elsewhere and the employers to seek others to perform their work. Upon such a previous declaration of war are the carpenters and masons in Brooklyn and New York proceeding. They propose to strike on the first of April unless the contractors accede to their demand for an increase of fifty cents wages per day of eight hours. Upon a similar basis the miners of Youngstown, Ohio, inaugurated their strike some weeks since. Having notified their employers that on a certain day they would cease work unless their wages were advanced, the employers after mature deliberation notified them that their demand could not be complied with. At the appointed time they stopped work, but no further negotiations took place, except that the employers sent them a formal notice that if they desired to resume work within a certain stated period, at the old wages, they could do so, otherwise, persons would be sought for to fill their places. At the time stated in the notice their places were filled with operatives who had been obtained elsewhere, and the strikers made no demonstration against the new hands. The old laborers are still waiting for something to do, looking out for situations wherever they can, and the mines are being worked as usual.

Several weeks since, it was rumored that a combination of Eastern telegraphic lines had been effected, and that there would soon be instituted a vigorous opposition to the overland lines of the Western Union Company. Following this came the announcement of an important reduction in the tariff of the last named company. The Postal Telegraph scheme together with the energetic movement among Eastern telegraphists accomplished this much. It is now stated that the Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Company have gained control of the Franklin Company's lines between Washington and New York, and that they will connect with the Southern and Atlantic Company whose lines are now extended to Montgomery, Alabama. These will be pushed to New Orleans. It is also said that the Atlantic and Pacific Company have capital subscribed towards extending their lines from Washington City to Cincinnati and westward. It is also expected, adds our informant that the Pacific and Atlantic Company, a corporation of great wealth and influence, whose wires run from New York to Pittsburg and Louisville, and thence to New Orleans, will enter the combination. This consolidation if it be effected, will place some of the strongest telegraphic corporations in the United States under the management of the Atlantic and Pacific company.

It has been said that the steamer Pelican would go on the line between this port and San Francisco. This report, however, is contradicted by the San Francisco Call of the 23d instant. That paper says: 'Alterations and improvements costing $12,000 having been made on the Pelican, a screw propeller owned by Ben Holladay, Jr., her trial trip took place yesterday. The Pelican is intended for the trade between Lurelin, Crescent City and San Francisco.'

The Herald most respectfully declines to be tail to the Oregonian's kite.—Herald.

Well, you have had choice. Being only fit to hang behind something, you have deliberately resolved to be Ben Holladay's tail. We envy neither you nor your master the joy you both must have in the new arrangement.

Parties have their newspaper organs and have had through all the mutations of our party politics, but we have now a new phase in journalism, namely, one paper acting as the organ of another. The Bulletin is now run as the organ of the Herald.

The Amende Honorable

Our attention has been called to an inaccuracy or rather an indistinctness in our statement in yesterday's paper in regard to the demand against the Herald establishment which was being pushed to judgment by the Presidents of the Bulletin company. The debt referred to was not payable to the Bulletin Lake that upon which Mr Pittock had recovered judgment it was for material furnished to the Herald company. At our reference to the debt we were informal and ended differently by some, we thereby make this explanation in favor of the Bulletin, believing that to be an opportunity such as falls to the lot of few persons in the course of a lifetime, to give the devil his due. What we said is strictly true, however namely that the Presidents of the Bulletin company was pressing the claim and he held to judgment as rapidly as the law would allow.

According to the report of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, the civilizing influences of the Christian religion have penetrated the country of the Garos, who inhabit the hilly districts of the southeast part of Assam. Last year some 'indiscretions' of these tribes provoked the British government to undertake an expedition against them which was commenced in November and has but lately terminated. The result of this expedition is, the Garos are brought directly under British rule, and the work of the Christian missions can be carried on among them without the dangers which surrounded the missionaries before the expedition. Also, roads have been opened by the expedition, to connect this outlying region with those sections that have been longer under British dominion, and the progress of civilization is thus given the impetus of free and frequent intercourse with the more advanced tribes of Assam.

The missionaries report the conversion and baptism of three hundred Garos. These native christians live in the valleys along the northern frontier of the hill country. The hostile attitude of the clans have prevented hitherto any very extensive operations in the interior of the Garo Territory. Two Christian preachers who visited the interior last summer were arrested by the Independent Garos, who threatened to punish them for the introduction of the Christian religion and the attempt to overthrow the religion of the country. But when it was discovered that the preachers had sufficient medical skill to vaccinate for the small pox, they were treated with great civility and were permitted to go on with their labors, vaccinating the people by day and preaching to them by night.

Mrs A. J. Dunway, editor and proprietor of our spicy and attractive neighbor, the New Northwest, announces that that journal is to take "a few months' vacation." We regret the necessity which compels this temporary suspension, and hope that within the time named, we shall be able to welcome back to service this staunch friend of truth. The New Northwest has done excellent service and we should regret to hear that any cause such as lack of encouragement could prevent its reappearance.

We do not know whether all eight hundred dollar people are unanimous in their views or not, but the editor of the Statesman certainly is. He considers it highly respectable to call the local reporter of the OREGONIAN "contrib," but that it is blackguardism to call a transaction in relation to swine swinish. The point of distinction is entirely too fine for our comprehension, but Crandall sees it distinctly and squeals over it worse than Jones' hogs.

We regret the necessity of characterizing the conduct of the two Holladay organs of this city so plainly as we were compelled to do in our yesterday's paper. It is always unpleasant to call such conduct as those conspirators were guilty of by its right name, but it is better, after all, or rather, less bad, than to mince words about matters which even the strongest Saxon can express but feebly!

We are told that the young man who conducts the Herald affects great indignation on account of the idea becoming current, that he sold himself to Holladay, and he declares that although it may be true that "every man has his price," &c. has never yet named his. Nobody said he had. The current opinion is that Holladay named it.

Dennis Murphy, with whom the Senate Committee on Printing made a contract to report the Senate debates, is to receive one dollar and four cents per one thousand ems printing measure, with twenty per cent additional as remuneration for reporting the debates.

The steamship Alaska which arrived in San Francisco from China a few days since, brought 1,229 Chinese passengers.

The base ingratitude of the Herald deserves "to point a moral," while the editor thereof "adorns a tail."

Madam Lucca, the vocalist, has declared her intention to become a citizen of the United States.

The Interior Frets on the "Alliance"

How was this radical change of heart, so speedily wrought in the Herald, brought about, is the question that now agitates. The Herald was represented to us a few days ago as being on shaky legs—barely able to stand at all. Will these legs be a rougheard one by this change?—Albany Register.

The Portland Herald is said to have gone over to Holladay body and under wear. Money catches 'em every while.—Albany Register.

While the Herald was a Democratic paper, free and unfettered, it had three subscribers in town. Soon that paper turned its somersault twice those subscribers that we have heard of proposed to discontinue, and we shall not be surprised to know soon that there isn't a Daily Herald taken from the McMinnville postoffice.—McMinnville Reporter.

We received a private letter from Eugene City yesterday in which the writer states that he has six months paid subscription to the Herald, and says "I will sell it for two bits." This is the feeling of nearly all its subscribers.—Oregon City Enterprise.

We notice that the Herald has a new head. It is turned toward Holladay. For fear that people may not know it, that paper has become foolishly fulsome.—Salem Mercury.

We woke up last Tuesday morning after the arrival of Ben Holladay from the East, and found the Portland Herald of that date throwing over the Bulletin in the shade in its laudations of "the great railroad king." Do we smell a large sized mice?—States Rights Democrat.

The Herald continues to be issued daily, but its editor, publishers and proprietors are all left out. It says it will continue to be Democratic, but we hardly think it will be so "by a very large majority."—States Rights Democrat.

Holladay has succeeded in adding the Herald to his list of obsequious journalistic admirers. The Herald Printing Company disclaims all responsibility for the sale surrender, and discontinues their paper. If the Company was betrayed, the slimy reptile who did it should be held to account by the public.—Lafayette Courier.

The above are all the Oregon papers that have come to hand since the Herald put on the collar, except the Salem Statesman. Of course this little seven-by nine echoes the Bulletin and Herald. Its financial relations to the railway ring would not permit it to do otherwise.

Letter from a Polk County Republican—No. 3.

POLK COUNTY, March 14th, 1873.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

You will recollect that when I met you in Portland sometime ago, I counseled forbearance toward the Bulletin, and advised that as little be said about former dissentions as possible, and that everything but principle should be sacrificed for the sake of maintaining the integrity of the Republican party. But if the Bulletin persisted in its attacks upon those men who labored to secure the election of the ticket of their choice (which has been at why then I desired that the ring be unmasked, and all its iniquity held up to public view. I deemed it but just to the public that it be made acquainted with the history of that ring for the last few years, for the purpose of enabling it to form a correct estimate of the sincerity of those men, who have been denouncing in such bitter terms the conduct of some of the old est and truest Republicans in the State, who chose to act from a conviction of right rather than bow to the dictation of one man. When the history of this ring is fully known, the public will be able to comprehend this mad dog cry with which the Bulletin has saluted our care for several months past, or since the present editor has had the control of it. I am glad to know that you listened to the counsel and advice of your friends, and for a long time scarcely noticed the attacks of that paper. But your silence was attributed to cowardice, and only provoked a repetion of those attacks. If, therefore, there has been a shell find that the controversy they invoked ultimately places them in an unenviable position they will have themselves to thank for it.

I showed conclusively in my second letter that in 1870 the editor of the Bulletin and his friends sought Democrats to votes for the purpose of securing the election of a Republican U. S. Senator, and the cry about political alliance was simply slop trap, and was done for the purpose of hiding their own shame. I now propose to show some other things that were done at the sitting of the Legislature by that Multnomah ring. When it was found that a Republican Senator could not be elected, the chief of that ring commanded that a Democrat be chosen whom he could control, and who was not antagonistic to his interest. Hence there was an effort made by this ring to elect a Senator of the Democratic persuasion. It should be borne in mind that Col. Kelly was the choice of a majority of the Democratic members, but it was believed that by securing the most of the Republicans for the chief's candidate, that enough Democratic members could be obtained to elect him. There were quite a number of Republicans whose consent was obtained to vote for this Democrat, and all that saved the party from being betrayed into the hands of the great chief of that ring, and inflicting upon the State a regular Democrat of the rebel stripe, was the fidelity of a few Republicans.

Now, as I am a very inquisitive old gentleman, and as I was not in the ring, and as I do not know, or if I do am not ready to state at this time, the exact number of Republicans, who were willing to betray their party, I would respectfully ask the editor of the Bulletin to state the number, and I would further ask him to tell us to what extent he used his influence to accomplish the wishes of that great chief. It is a matter of great interest and importance, too, in settling up these little accounts with the ring that the public, and especially the Republican party, know all the facts, and no one, if he will, can tell these facts so well, perhaps, as the present editor of the Bulletin. When these facts are fully stated,—and they will be, by and by—the public will be able to see more clearly the true character and political status of these virtuous gentlemen who are trying to crush out the truest Republicans of the State—Republicans who assisted in the organization of the party and fought its battles while these men, whom the editor is hugging to his bosom as fit subjects for his praise and for political preferment, were trying to crush the Republican party and overthrow the Government. Now, Mr. Editor, do you not think that it is exceedingly cool, and thin, too, in these men, after doing all this, to howl about party usage? And further, what must the public think of a man, a professed Republican, the editor of the leading Republican paper in the State, and who was expected to labor for the interest, the harmony and the continuity of his party, who would hasten to the Capital at the command of his master—who was never much of a Republican—and labor for the election of a Democrat? Is it not astonishing that after such a transition in his party, a party that made him, he should have the cheek to write day after day attacks upon those Republicans who have always been faithful to their party? That ring had a fearful record. I am not yet through with it. If I am allowed the use of your columns I propose to show the character of some of these men whom the Bulletin is delighted to call good Republicans, and if they will only have removed from office a certain gentleman so as to provoke him to give me a few receipts that he has, I will show up the official conduct of one who has held office almost all the time since Col. Baker was elected. Boat justicia ruat coelum, and I may add though some of our own friends fall. When all of the last two sessions of the Legislature is fully understood, perhaps it will be found that a certain editor is not free from moral taint as well as political perfidy.

JUSTICE.

The Latest Democratic Alliance.

YAMHILL, March 27, 1873.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

The Bulletin's declaration that my last bore "unmistakable evidence" of being your own composition, has so fed my vanity that I essay another letter.

The past few rainy days have effectually stopped farming operations, and our populace have an opportunity for the last gossip before the busy season sets in again.

Fortunately there is a subject to be found of some general interest, though in the absence of any popular feeling on the subject of politics, the theme is shorn of half its attractions. Still the somersault of the Herald serves for a topic in the absence of a more practical subject. Republicans express no surprise at the sudden "conversion" of a Democrat, for they have seen a fire eating, pro slavery citizen of the Sandwich Islands, suddenly transformed into a Radical editor of a Court journal, for substantial reasons; they have seen that a Democratic leader and campaign speaker makes a first class Republican, in a "postoffice," they have seen acting Democratic ward politicians changed in the twinkling of an eye to Republicans when employed as conductors, baggage masters, brakesmen or clerks in a railroad office. Hence there is nothing wonderful or unusual in the sight of one more on his knees before a golden shrine. There seems also to be a peculiar fitness in the fact that the youth whose brilliant "auto biography," last fall, brought two railway companies, two or three shipping companies, a real estate association, and a dozen other corporations to his own terms, should be employed to sing peans of praise to the individual he honored so easily.

In another aspect, however, the transaction places astonishment. It may be perfectly natural that "my two papers, both daily," should pat each other on the back, and approvingly quote authorities from each other, but that the Bulletin, laboring hand in hand with the Herald, should condemn "Democrats in alliances" is an exhibition of audacity that reaches to the sublime. Politics truly makes strange bedfellows, but when such an incongruous trio as Scott, O'Meara and Newell, all pull under the same yoke, it is beyond my imagination to conceive what sort of alliance they could condemn.

Among Democrats, the feeling is far different. They refuse to believe that an organization, whose only mode of preservation is by means of "twenty dollar pieces," is a pattern of morality or political purity, and they as obstinately refuse to believe that any other kind of argument can be used to convert a publisher who announces that pecuniary difficulty compels a change in his course of action. It seems impossible to make these people see that retrieving a newspaper office from a heavy liability is simply a tribute of respect, and that the subsequent and immediate change of programme in that newspaper is merely one of those remarkable coincidences that sometimes take place. They insist on coupling the two circumstances together, and reason therefrom that the recent talk about "Democratic alliances" was only the old dodge of crying "stop thief," and in this case it worked so well that it diverted all suspicion or even attention until the arrangements were all consummated. As an instance of the feeling in Democratic circles, I was at a post office to day from which three copies of the Herald are taken, and two of the subscribers being present, agreed to stop their paper although it was paid for in advance, one of them said he must have a paper, but he would not even seem to countenance that one, and would take the OREGONIAN right away.

Now, Mr. Editor, since the Bulletin secures you of falsehood in writing my letter, and accuses Messrs Hinman, Wakefield, Bowley and Herman of acting against the party, let me propose one question to the principal editor of that paper. When did either of the four gentlemen ever vote a ticket nominated by Democrats, and when did the Bulletin man vote any other kind? There is a test question.

The Massachusetts House of Representatives refused, March 21st, to consider a resolution censuring certain of her Congressional delegation for supporting the salary steal.

CITY.

CHARTER OF CONDITIONAL PARDON.—Fillmore Fraser who was pardoned out of the Penitentiary on Wednesday by Governor Grover has had quite an eventful career since his confinement in that institution In 1864 Fraser was arrested in Douglas county on a charge of horse stealing, and committed to jail to await his trial Before the examination came off, he concluded to effect his escape The jail in which he was confined was a mostly constructed log house In some means the prisoner obtained fire, and not being able to get out to freedom One night he built a fire at the door, concealed the project of burning his way out to freedom One night he built a small fire down at one side of the jail against the logs after the guard had retired. Carefully keeping it from blazing up and getting beyond his control, Fraser succeeded before daylight in burning out a hole sufficiently large to admit of his passage. He crawled through and walked away leaving the jail on fire The first intimation the keeper had that anything was wrong was his discovery that the building was a heap of charred ruins However, the ... was found out, pursuit given, and Fraser was recaptured a few weeks after his escape He was tried on the ... indictment of larceny and arson, convicted and sentenced to hard labor for the term of ten years At the time of the great break among the convicts in Linn, Fraser, thinking that a general stampede would take place, ran with those who escaped He did not make extra exertions to get away, and was recaptured in a few hours On being taken back, Fraser gave unmistakable indications of insanity For several weeks it was thought that he was "only playing" and was still retained at the Penitentiary He constantly grew worse, and finally gave the keepers so much trouble by his violence, it was deemed prudent to remove him to the Asylum At that institution he was so extremely turbulent that rigorous means were frequently employed to enforce obedience to the rules While under treatment there, he complains of receiving very harsh treatment at the hands of the officers of that institution. This, however, is only his statement of the case. After being in the Asylum about one year, he was pronounced by the physicians to be sufficiently recovered to warrant his removal to the Penitentiary He was accordingly taken back, where he remained until pardoned No allowance was made for the time he was confined in the Asylum, and so one whole year count al nothing towards filling out his term of imprisonment With the exception that during his spell of lunacy, when he was difficult to control, his conduct was uniformly exemplary, and his habits steady and industrious. He gave the officers little or no trouble, and became quite a favorite with Superintendent and Keepers According to the standard of penality, his good behavior reduced the term of his confinement one year and a month, making the time he was actually imprisoned in the penitentiary nine years and eleven months Mr Fraser is quite an old man, being beyond his fiftieth year. He speaks in the highest terms of the general management of the penitentiary, and of the kindness and humanity of Superintendent and officers The sad experience of the last ten years has convinced Mr Fraser that honesty is the best policy, and he has expressed a firm determination to reform and lead a useful and honorable life in the future. His very commendable resolutions should meet every where with sympathy and encouragement He is now in the city

DETAINED BY ACCIDENT.—Mr. Beriah Brown, of the Seattle Dispatch, who is now in this city awaiting the departure of the next San Francisco steamer, was prevented from getting on board the steamer Oreflamme, at Kalama, by an accident which came near resulting in the loss of his life Early this week he left Seattle for Portland, under the impression that the Oreflamme would not sail until Friday evening. On his arrival at Tenino, he learned to his surprise that the steamer was to sail on Wednesday. Immediately after reaching Kalama, he telegraphed to the agent of the steamship company stating that he would get on board the Oreflamme when she came down After much trouble he procured a small boat and an old sailor who agreed to row out into the stream and thus enable him to board the vessel. Long after darkness set in, the signal lights of the approaching steamer were discovered as the vessel came down the river. Mr. Brown was notified of the fact, and with valise in hand he started for the wharf where the skiff and boatman were waiting. The darkness was intense, the wind was blowing a fitful gale, and the rain pouring in torrents. Not being acquainted with the premises, Mr Brown missed his way and stepped off the edge into the river, carrying with him his valise. He shouted lustily, which gave the alarm, and in an instant all was confusion. Being an expert swimmer, Mr Brown kept himself afloat notwithstanding he was encumbered with a heavy coat. Fortunately he was near the wharf's edge, and on coming to the surface, he grasped one of the piles and held himself up, until succor arrived. But the prevailing darkness, and the confusion incident to the occasion prevented the arrival of the small boat until Mr. Brown was well nigh exhausted After being deposited in safety on the wharf, a search was made for the valise, which was at length recovered In the meantime no one had thought to make a signal to the steamer, and she had passed from sight before Mr Brown was safe and the excitement of the moment abated.

PANAMA CHINA.—Advices were received by Mr Moffett from China, by the steamer Atalanta, which arrived at San Francisco from Hongkong a few days ago. The bark Edward James, which sailed for Shanghai with a cargo of lumber from Barnard's Inlet some time during the latter part of November last, arrived in safety at her destination on the 15th of January The bark Fortune arrived at Hongkong on the 16th of January, one day before the Edward James Both sailed about the same time, but the former arrived at her destination a little sooner on account of the favorableness of the port. The advices stated that the barks Garibaldi and Forward were both on the berth for Portland: Also the Canada was loading for this port. It is not known when the James will return here—probably not before next fall—as she will enter into the coasting trade between the several Chinese sea ports

PILE DRIVER SUNK.—The pile driver which has been used for some months past in hoisting the ballast from the holds of vessels at McCraken's wharf, sank yesterday afternoon while lying alongside the bark Tamaya No particular attention was paid to the large scow by the person who has been operating the "donkey" since the rains began. The heavy rains filled the hull until the water ran over the edge and caused the craft to sink. The scow was securely fastened to the bark, and when it filled with water it drew the vessel far over on her side. The ropes held up one side of the scow which caused the boiler and engine to roll off and sink to deep water. All or the most of these may be recovered, but not all but the considerable expense and damage The scow which is of far less value than the machinery, will be raised without much difficulty

ROAD TAX ROLL.—The Deputy County Clerk, Mr Borthwick, is now engaged in making out rolls for the four Road Districts of the county which will be delivered to the several supervisors when completed. Each supervisor is required to furnish the County Clerk with a list of persons residing in his district, subject to pay road tax The Clerk by consulting the assessment roll is enabled to place opposite each man's name the amount of road tax due Those who are not owners of property, either real or personal, are required to disburse the modest little sum of four dollars toward keeping the highways in a good traveling condition The rolls will be finished in time for the commencement of the general road improvements

AT SAN FRANCISCO.—The brig Parthenier arrived at San Francisco about the 14th inst from the coast of Lower California, with a cargo of grain. The brig arrived in safety, and the cargo was in excellent condition At present the Bath Belle is discharging cargo, and will soon be on the berth for Portland

CANDIDATE FOR OFFICE.—As will be seen by our advertising columns, Mr I F Horne announces himself a candidate for School Clerk for District No 1, at the approaching election, subject to the choice of the legal voters of the same

QUARTERLY EXAMINATION.—There will be a quarterly examination of teachers who are desirous of obtaining certificates, at the Central School House to day Examinations will be held from 9 A. M. to 12, and from 2 P M to 4

ELECTED.—At a recent meeting held by the Directors of the East Portland Odd Fellow's Hall Association, Mr John Kenworthy was elected President of the Board for the ensuing year, and Hall S. Williams, Secretary.

AMUSEMENTS.

On the evening of the 10th of April, the Order of Jolly Good Fellows propose to give a masquerade ball at the Washington Guard Armory The last ball given under the auspices of this Order at that place was a signal success, and the forthcoming one seems promises in all respects to equal the former one The following are the committee Reception Committee—J P Fort, Charles Lewis, H B Stephenson, E Norman, R Jennings, Jas F Gallagher, J Nelson, and L Phillips Floor Managers—J W Stone, F W Chambers, J B Kellogg, W H Butts and J O Hanthorn

There appears to be no diminution of public interest in the entertainments given at Oro Fino Theater by Carl Bosco, the favorite necromancer. If the nightly attendance is an indication. The large auditorium was crowded last evening, on the occasion of the second entertainment No startling new feats in the conjuring art of necromancy were introduced, but Bosco performs all his tricks in such a clever manner that interest never flags, even if they are frequently repeated This afternoon he will give a matinee for the benefit of ladies and children. Positively the last entertainment will be given this evening, when several startling feats will be introduced So route your seats early.

UP THE VALLEY

SALEM, March, 28, '73

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

Having some business up the valley I took advantage of the trip of the Governor Grover up the river last Monday Oregon City was reached in good season, but some delay was occasioned in passing through the locks, from the fact that the Multnomah had the first chance, requiring the attention of all hands employed on the locks The Multnomah got through and a little time was devoted to "baking" the Grover Between Oregon City and Lafayette the Multnomah, Hope, Dayton and Grover kept well together—the two former went up the Yamhill Nothing of special import occurred on the trip except what has already been mentioned

Arriving at Corvallis at 11 A M Tuesday, and being assured that timely notice would be given when the boat would leave, we went up town to seek friends who were prepared to attend to "biz" and items for the OREGONIAN The town seemed to be rather dull, and the remarks of merchants "clinched" our belief W B Carter and Bob Head conduct the papers, opposite in politics of course but socially at home together The latter is economizing and now manages his affairs entirely under the roof of his mansion—modest in appearance, yet comfortable withal The fire district has been covered with new frame buildings I was a severe blow, but the owners of the property were wide awake and did not allow the ground to remain vacant. "Big, Six" (double decker engine), manned by some thirty six members, is the protective agent against fire, and has seen service but once since it was brought to town Hooks and ladders, also a hose carriage constitute the equipments of the house in connection with the engine

The City Hotel is to be remodeled, and rumor says Mr E C Holden of the Cliff House, Oregon City, will take charge of the reconstructed edifice

Two saw mills are running on full time, and the sash and door factory will shortly resume operations Several "Disciples of the law" were absent at court in Albany

Mr M D Merrick, of the I C R C, was in town endeavoring to organize a new lodge He subsequently proceeded to Lincoln City, where he was to lecture on Thursday evening

The Grover started for Albany at three o'clock P M, making the run in 15 minutes. Albany shares the fortunes of Corvallis and most other valley towns—regarding dull times I could obtain but few notes worthy of mention, and give you these with pleasure

There has been very little improvement since my last trip Conner's Bank (brick building) completed sometime ago, and the new City Hall, (frame), underway, besides a few dwellings, comprise the list of new buildings and improvements Mart V Brown is at the head of a lodge of I C R C with 2 members to look after He, with the Democrat, as well as Van Cleve of the Register, across the way, are doing the best they can. That is all anybody can do.

Joe Webber is still Chief Engineer of the Albany Fire Department, which information I gave for the benefit of the fire boys of Portland His duties are performed with promptness and attention

The Circuit Court is in session Of the proceedings you will be informed by other parties The county jail has a few occupants, some of whom are awaiting the action of the court in these ...os

Tangent, six miles south of Albany, is growing in importance At this point is a warehouse, with a capacity of holding 60,000 bushels of grain, It was contracted by Board & Co, last fall At present 17,000 sacks of wheat are stored in this warehouse.

The trains each way stop at Junction City for dinner Smith, Brooks'd & Co, of Harrisburg, have just opened an extensive branch house there, and other improvements will follow Considerable building lumber lies along the railroad

Eugene is the terminal point of our trip We found there marked changes accumulated since our last call—eight months ago—several brick and frame buildings having been constructed Plans for the new State University are expected daily. When received, contracts will be let and the construction of the building commenced J D Kincaid, Esq, publisher of the Journal, proposes to put up a brick building to be occupied as the office of the Journal

The office of the Journal has been remodeled and made quite handsome

Burnheim & Mark are shipping hides to Portland

Mr Lever, of Friendly & Lever, and A V Peters, are absent in San Francisco purchasing goods

The city election takes place Monday April 7th, and candidates for Recorder and Marshal are jumping up freely

The Hook and Ladder Company is in splendid order and reflects credit on those who got it up.

Four drug stores supply Eugene and vicinity with pills, etc

The people at Corvallis, Albany, Eugene and Harrisburg are bound to keep up the opposition if they pay higher freights That is the sentiment

The Fate of the Wright's Passengers and Crew—A Horrible Story

The Puget Sound Courier publishes correspondence in regard to the probable fate of the passengers and crew of the steamer Geo S Wright, which that journal says was handed in for publication by a gentleman of the highest respectability, who vouches for the writer The story seems almost too revolting for credence, but the Courier states its readiness to give the names of the writer and the person who handed the letters to that journal We copy the correspondence.

ALERT BAY, B C, March 10, 1873

EDITOR COURIER.—Ere this you have, of course, heard the fate of the Wright, but a sadder and more horrible tale remains yet to be told Two white men and a white woman came ashore on a raft, and the men were murdered and eaten by a tribe of Indians known as the Klanaghs One body was devoured there, and the other body given to the Mamalalakul'as. One savage was seen devouring the head and neck of one of the victims The bodies were presented to these two tribes by the Ow wi ke hus, who still hold the white woman for feast. Some say she is dead, while others declare that she is still alive and used for vile purposes, and is to be sacrificed on a certain day The fate of the latter is questioned, as the feast was no secret All these tribes are practical cannibals, and have been worse for the past six years than before for, as they had free license to do as they pleased while the Active was chums were pending, and might be wanted for cut throats What British subjects

EDITOR COURIER.—Through the medium of your paper I would make the public aware of the state of matters on the coast of British Columbia, and the uncertainty of life and property in transit through those waters to the territory. Here the fate of the Geo S Wright and the murder of American citizens by the savages near Cape Caution, and scores still, devoured by those cannibals, who were petted while the Active was chums were in question During that time six murders of white men and three piracies have taken place, and although complaints have immediately and repeatedly been made to the proper authorities, no notice was taken of them The Indians are told openly that to murder "Bostons" is no crime, only to do it up to the handle. This country is cursed with two elements that caused all the trouble in Oregon—the Hudson Bay Company and the same priests who were driven from Spokane, and their missions razed to the ground by U S troops, as being necessary to Indian wars and adverse to the settlement of the country by Americans The Indians of this coast are allowed to do as they please They are known murderers, pirates and cannibals, yet, when pointed out to the authorities they are not punished The cruise of H M Satellite is a farce, as time will show The news of the disaster did not come from the Hudson Bay Co's fort although there is one near the place And why did the authorities take a half breed trader as interpreter from there, instead of the white man who had sent the news?

The Laws of Health.

It is useless for State Legislatures to pass laws for the preservation of the public health If the great law of self preservation, which depends for its enforcement upon the will of the individual, is suffered to remain a dead letter There is scarcely an adult member of the community, of either sex, in this country, who has not seen the testimony in favor of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, furnished over their own signatures by persons of acknowledged eminence in science, literature, art, commerce, and every department of business and professional life These witnesses have declared in the most specific terms that the preparation is a safeguard against epidemics, a sovereign remedy for dyspepsia, a valuable anti bilious medicine, a promoter of appetite, a gentle and harmless stimulant, a good ecclimating medicine, strengthener of the nerves, a general invigorant, a protection against the deleterious effects of malaria and impure water, and that it imparts a degree of vigor and activity to the vital forces which is not communicated by any other of the tonics and stomachics in use. Under these circumstances the self preservative law of nature should teach every rational person who, either by reason of inherent debility or in consequence of exposure to unwholesome influences, is in peril of losing the greatest of all temporal blessings, health, the importance of using the Bitters as a defensive medicine. Dyspeptics who neglect to give it a trial are simply their own enemies. It is gas entered to cure indigestion in all its forms and the billions and nervous will find nothing in the whole range of official and proprietary medicines which will afford them the same relief

A Lost Chord

Seated one day at the organ,
I was weary at heart and sad
And my fingers wandered idly
Over the ivory keys

I know not what I was playing
Or what I was dreaming then,
But I struck one chord of music
Like the sound of a great Amen

It flooded the room in twilight
Like the sound of an angel's psalm
It lay on my soul in spirit
With a touch of infinite calm

It quieted pain and trouble
Like love overcoming strife
It seemed the harmony of heaven
From out this restless life

Like a prayer both pure and tender
Like a voice of love in dreams
It entered into my being
And filled my heart with themes

It may be that death's bright angel
Shall speak in that chord again
It may be that only in heaven
I shall hear that great Amen.

A MERCHANT KIDNAPPED

BRANDON DAILY EDITION, H TROY

PUGET SOUND, March 7, 1873

A strange story comes from the lips of Captain McDaniels, a resident of Canonsburg, a village handy to this city McDaniels served throughout the late war, bears the character of a gentleman, and has reputation for honesty and veracity unimpeachable He is a prosperous merchant of Canonsburg, the pillar of a Presbyterian church, and the story, though it may smack of sensationalism, your correspondent is assured on the word of a prominent minister of this village, is strictly true, in his own language, "McDaniels' word is as good as his bond"

In October last McDaniels left for New York to purchase a stock of goods, and it was generally known to the residents of the village that he had a large sum of money in his possession He was to return within a week, but months went by and no word came to his family of his whereabouts or his intentions.

THE MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE OF THIS MAN

furnished food for gossip for the press of the country at the time, but the conclusion arrived at was that he had been robbed, murdered and his body thrown into the river. Some persons were of the opinion that he was on the brink of financial ruin, and had collected all the means he could with a view of defrauding his creditors, and had taken a steamer for Europe, or, by leaving no trace behind him, had hoped to baffle every attempt at recapture by those interested Detectives were employed by his relatives, rewards were offered; the prisons of New York and the Morgue of that city were searched, and every thing done that might possibly throw some light on the singular disappearance. Months were spent in a

to the whereabouts of the missing man, but time brought no tidings, and the circumstance was almost forgotten, except by his most intimate friends and grief stricken family A week or so ago great was the astonishment and joy of the people of Canonsburg in learning that a letter had been received from Captain McDaniels dated New Orleans, detailing his wonderful adventures, and requesting that money be sent to that city to enable him to reach home. Some persons half scruples that the writer of the letter, cognizant of the disappearance of McDaniels, was attempting to prey upon the credulity of the family and swindle them out of the money, but the handwriting was familiar, and the overjoyed family were only too glad to forward the remittance On his return home the villagers extended to the wanderer the heartiest kind of a reception, and his establishment every day is filled with people who come to offer their congratulations and hear his strange story. Before he told of his adventures to me, he said he learned with regret from his family that some of the newspapers had not treated his case without prejudice to his character as a Christian and honorable gentleman.

THE CAPTAIN'S STORY.

I took my leave of this village on the 8th of October, in company with an old and intimate friend, Dr. Martin, and arrived at Philadelphia on the morning of the day following. While at the breakfast table one Mr Ewing, with whom I had a slight business acquaintance, came to the table, and during our conversation he remarked that he was going to New York in the same train I intended to take. Ewing being a salesman in a wholesale house of the metropolis, our conversation on the cars was principally on matters pertaining to the trade we both were engaged in I noticed in our immediate vicinity a tall, fine-looking gentleman, dressed very tastefully, and who was deeply interested in the contents of the New York Herald of that morning When my companion left his seat to take another in the smoking car this gentleman came forward, and, in the politest way imaginable said

"Pardon me, sir, you have come East for goods, I believe?"

I replied that the nature of my errand was to purchase a stock of a certain kind of goods for my establishment at Canonsburg, near Pittsburg, when he took the seat vacated by my friend Ewing, and we entered into a conversation. He stated he was a salesman for a large house in the city, and, requested my permission to exhibit some goods. Laces, ribbons and samples of most all sorts of white goods were shown, and I found his prices were astonishingly low compared with what I had been paying. I left him at Jersey City after giving him my address and particularly requesting him to call at the St. Nicholas Hotel. I went down to the ferry, where I met Ewing, and when midway in the stream who should come up but my polite sample case friend, who engaged in an amiable conversation with me till the ferry-boat touched the slip I left Ewing in the throng, and having been but once before in New York I was apprehensive lest I would get lost, so I inquired of the stranger the readiest way to the St. Nicholas, when he kindly volunteered to conduct me at least part of the way, and put me on a straight road to it. On our way thither we

PRODUCING A POCKET SAMPLE CASE,

the gentleman inviting me to take something, and having a severe headache through riding on the cars I called for a cup of coffee. I can remember distinctly the barroom, but not its location It was on the ground floor, the bar in the back part near the rear wall of the house, the refreshment tables were in front, and all persons connected with the place looked clean and tidy I drank two cups of coffee in this house when I became deathly sick and remembered being removed to a carriage, when I became unconscious, when I came to I felt miserable above anything I ever experienced in my life I felt the tortures of the damned, I was half frozen—cramped so that I could hardly drag my limbs, and my head, oh heavens! I thought it would crack at every throb The place I was in was as

DARK AS MIDNIGHT

I did not believe that till I put my hands to my eyes to see if actually they were open I felt myself rocking to and fro as if I were on the ocean, I crawled about with a view of finding a door or window, but failing in my efforts I sank again into a state of insensibility When I recovered I found I was in a sort of dungeon, and further discovered a pan of water beside me I drank the water which relieved my parched throat, and putting my hands in my pockets I became aware of my loss. Every penny had been taken, also a portion of my wardrobe, two drafts on New York, watch, chain and pin, in all amounting to about seven thousand dollars I know then that I had been

and waited patiently for some one to come and put a bullet in me it would have afforded me relief The rolling and tramping overhead and the flooring on every side convinced me that I was on board of a vessel At length a trap door opened overhead and the dim outlines of a human form appeared He came down the ladder, put some bread meat and water before me and quickly stole up the ladder, paying no attention whatever to my questions. I crawled up by the same means he had, but found the trap bolted, so I descended and decided to await events. I had no means of knowing how long I had been caged in that vile den for I was insensible a portion of the time and continually in darkness Anxiety for my family had superseded all thought of physical pain, and so I patiently awaited till two men came to me and told me to follow them. I willingly obeyed They spoke English fluently

I SEE A CERTAIN OF THE STARS

on to the deck I was on three men were forward and they passed to the port side of us and brought around by means of a rope a boat into which I was lowered I was ordered to lie down forward and two men rowed and one held the tiller There were many stars flashing across the sky and but few stars were visible The faces of the men I could not very well see though they did not attempt to conceal them The vessel of course I could not recognize We ground hard on the sand, at one thirty feet from shore, and before this I knew we were near shore for I could hear the surf rolling Though a heavy fog prevailed the men swore when we touched the bottom and ordered me to get out I firmly refused to jump into the water, when they pulled the boat somewhat closer to shore and then took hold of me and

which came up almost to my waist The water was quite warm and I waded to shore, reaching which I turned and saw the boat rapidly disappearing in the thick mist I lay down on the warm, white sand, and soon after fell asleep, from which I awoke just as it was breaking day I got up, looked for water to quench my thirst, and found some a good distance from the beach After this I sat down by the side of a road, and soon after in the gray mist of the morning, saw three men in uniform and on horseback The sight bewildered me, but I resolved on finding men whom I felt sure would help me in my distress I commenced to tell them my difficulty, but they didn't appear to understand me, and then I learned they could not speak English They motioned me to follow them, which I did I now thought that these men were Mexicans and that I had been set down on the coast of Mexico I was conveyed to a long, low building, searched, and finally put in an enclosure with eight or ten negroes who had been branded, some on the cheek, others on the forehead, and they were in a most nude condition In the little conversation that I could hold with these people I learned that I was

IN THE HANDS OF THE SPANIARDS

The soldiers were armed with a sabre and carbine, and were as dull, lazy-looking sort of men as I ever saw in that same profession. I spent four nights and days among the negroes in this prison, when the entire party in the darkness of the night made their escape Different routes were taken to prevent our recapture, and by the rarefied feeling of the air I could understand we had attained a pretty high elevation The negroes treated me with the utmost kindness, and gave me part of all the food they could procure This was generally fruit or vegetables One night, after a tramp of about ten miles, I was

AWAKENED BY THE BOOM OF A GUN

The sound was faint, as though it came from a long distance, but I felt sure it was the sound of a heavy gun. I learned then from the negroes we were near Havana, and so when they were asleep I left them and started on the road that led to the city After a mighty weary tramp I sighted the city but fearing that I would be arrested in the condition I was, and without a passport, I concluded to await the coming of night, which I did I then descended the mountains and walked into the city I was almost ragged and I felt my appearance would subject me to suspicion, so I dreaded the approach of daylight My determination was to seek the American Consul and ask for assistance to reach home, but on my way I happened in with an English sailor, whose name was Edward Ackley, and who took me on to the English bark Goldalpha, of Liverpool, sailing between that port and Havana and Demerara I remained on board all night and told my singular story to the crew, who relieved my wants and assisted me in

REPAIRING MY WARDROBE.

I therefrom wrote a letter to Dr. Alexander, of Canonsburg, Pa., requesting him to send me money to New Orleans. Ackley, who was steward of the vessel, got me a situation as shipping clerk in the house of Cumbargo & Co., Havana, and with them I remained some weeks I preferred to earn enough money to take me home rather than apply to the American Consul, perhaps to get a rebuff, as the story of mine was an unusual one, and I could not have blamed him if, upon apprehension, he had turned me out and told me into the bargain to go to the devil My stupidity deserved no better treatment With the money I earned at Cumbargo & Co's I paid my way to New Orleans and had still some left, which was fortunate, as the remittance I expected had not arrived I took a room in Burgundy street, taking my meals at Poydras street Market I had been in that city but a few days when I TOOK VIOLENTLY ILL.

The excitement and exposure of the past had been too much for my constitution, and I was prostrated on a sick bed I called in a doctor, who dispelled the notion that had got into my head that I had taken the yellow fever. In the meantime, and before I got over my illness, a remittance arrived from home, and as soon as I was well enough I started for home I did not stop, but was so glad to see those so near and very dear to me that I traveled constantly till I reached my old village and happy home.

A New York letter writer says the latest attempt of Woodhull and Claflin to blackmail a minister was made on the Rev Dr Bellows They sent him a printed proof of what they were going to publish about him in case he did not come down with the cash. He was not down in the stereotyped fashion as a wolf in sheep's clothing, as a pious profligate, and a sacerdotal sinner, etc Everybody is aware that Dr Bellows is not that sort of a man, and, moreover, is capable of an exalted degree of indignation Running his eye over the clear typography, his face flushed with righteous wrath. He informed the messenger of his opinion of these vile women, adding, if they published any such thing in regard to him, that he would make them smart for it He then advised the carrier to leave the house instanter, on pain of being kicked out of doors, and the carrier left Dr Bellows has regretted ever since that he showed so much amiability

PREVIOUS PRECOCITY One Sabbath, not long ago, the teacher of the infant Sabbath school class noticed one little fellow, who was not listening to what she said

She had been telling the story of David and Goliah, and wishing to see if he knew what she had been talking about, she suddenly asked, "Mallie, who killed Goliah?"

With an inquiring look, he replied, "Why, I didn't know he was dead!"

Another time she questioned him as follows

"Who was the first man?"

"Adam, he promptly answered

I encouraged by his quick reply, she thought she would ask him one more question and the following was propounded

"Who was the first woman?"

"Well," he replied, "I don't know, unless it was Mrs Adams"

In this age of wars against mothers-in-law it is really refreshing to read of an individual so free from prejudices of the day, so sublimely courageous as to marry his own mother-in law Such a case is reported from Memphis It cannot but be a satisfaction, also, to other mothers-in-law to know that this one remained true to herself and to her sister-hood for in less than a year she had made that man a life such a hollow mockery that he is now the plaintiff in a suit for divorce

The Colorado People says, The Hon Clawson, of Montana, delivered a lecture in Helena, a short time since on "Victor the Great, Chief of the Flatheads," in which it came out that Mr. C. is unquestionably in favor of flattening the heads of Victor and all others of the Indian race. 'Extermination' is his watchword

R F Fitzgerald, a solicitor for Etna Life Insurance company, of Hartford, in San Francisco, is suing the publishers and printers of the Pacific Coast Review for $100,000 damages to his reputation done by an article which accused him of being a swindler.

Cochise, the Apache Chief.

Gov Safford, of Arizona, writes for Chapfall's Western World an account of an interview which he had with Cochise, the most influential of Apache warriors, and whose exploits have kept Arizona, New Mexico, Sonora and Chihuahua in terror for years With regard to the early history of Cochise and the event which made him the enemy of Americans, the GOVERNOR SAYS

He is the chief of a band of Apaches who in olden times inhabited the country from the Gila on the north to some distance into Sonora on the south, and from the San Pedro on the west to the Mimbres in New Mexico on the east They have as far back as the memory of man here runs, been at war with the people of Mexico and their living has been principally obtained by robbery When Arizona was first possessed by the United States, for reasons best known to himself, Cochise sought and evidently desired peace with our people and government and this relation existed until 1860 During the time, however, he constantly raided upon the neighboring States in Mexico, and brought back herds of horses and cattle Occasionally stock was taken in Arizona by the Indians at points distant from his country, but it is understood that when complaints were made in such cases, he made an effort to restore the property During the year 1860, a boy was made captive while herding stock on the Sonoita, and some believed that Cochise had taken him, hence Lieut Bascom, with a company of soldiers, marched to Apache Pass near his headquarters and camped at the overland mail station The Lieutenant told the station keepers that he was on his way to Mexico, and that he desired to extend the hospitalities of his tent, as he was on his way out of the country Cochise and four of his friends and relatives came in, and when seated in Bascom's tent, it was suddenly surrounded by soldiers He demand to know the cause, and was informed that he and his friends were prisoners, and would be kept as such until the boy, believed to be with his band, was given up Cochise protested against such treachery, and declared that he could not give him up; as he know nothing about him Watching his opportunity, he drew his knife and cut a hole in the tent and escaped He immediately called his warriors together, and came in force near the station and desired to have a talk One of the station keepers went to him to hear what he had to say, but no sooner as he had reached Cochise's lines, he was seized and made a prisoner. A day or two was spent afterwards in endeavors to effect an exchange of prisoners,—Cochise offering to give up his prisoner if the Lieutenant would release his (Cochise's) friends The other declined to exchange only man for man unless Cochise would surrender the boy, but Cochise steadily affirmed that he knew nothing about him Finally he came for a last talk, leading his station-keeper prisoner, with a rope around his neck, tied to the horn of his saddle. He again offered to surrender him if his four friends were released The station keeper begged to have the exchange made, as his life would be forfeited if it was not done, but the lieutenant again refused, and Cochise "crowded this horse and dashed off at lightning speed, dragging his poor victim at full length by the neck. The lieutenant then hung the four prisoners, and Cochise took the road The people not being apprised that hostilities had broken out, fell easy victims and the horrible murders and tortures that followed for the next few days are sickening to relate, and from that time until the first of last September, scarcely a week passed without the commission of bloody deeds by his band His attack was made from ambush and invariably successful Sometimes he appeared to be supported by a large force, and again by a few followers. He was often reported to be at different points at the same time, frequently reported dead, and generally believed to be crippled for life. No matter what impressions were entertained regarding him and his force, one thing was certain, that he had for twelve years resisted all the power of the friendly tribes and what the governments of the United States and Mexico could bring to bear against him, and also that since the first of last April, he had been as successful in taking life and property as at any other period since he commenced hostilities.

Through the influence of Captain Jeffords, the only white man in whom Cochise professes confidence, peace has been fixed up with Cochise, but how long he will remain at peace, according to Gov. Stafford, is known only to "Him who rules over all"

The disastrous conflagration of the 21st inst, wherein the depot of the Erie railroad at Jersey City was destroyed, caused a loss of over $200,000. An exchange says

The New York Fire Department steamer Faith, with a number of small tugboats, threw immense quantities of water on the flames, but this did little toward extinguishing the fire. The Department Master of the Erie Railway, assisted by hundreds of citizens, succeeded in removing a large number of cars from beyond the reach of the flames, thus materially lessening the loss It is impossible at present to estimate the loss, but it will not be short of $150,000 on buildings, ferry-slips and merchandise The loss on the buildings and slips falls on the railroad company, while that on the merchandise falls on the shippers and consignees.

A dense smoke arose from the conflagration It was feared that the ferry boats might possibly be endangered, but they all escaped damage. A body of New York firemen, with a steam engine, left for the Pavonia ferry, about 3 30 p. m., to help to extinguish the fire At last accounts, Taylor's saloon was completely gutted The new freight depot, which cost $20,000, has been also destroyed, with 100 bales of cotton

From a later despatch we learn that the entire losses by the fire at the Erie depot is now believed not to aggregate more than $219,000, of which the Erie Company loses $190,000, the other losses being sustained by a few individuals. The Erie Company's safes, containing the Paymaster's funds and pay-rolls, are still in the ruins One safe contains a large amount of money The fire is now thoroughly extinguished and no further spread is apprehended The Erie Company have no special insurance, but have a floating policy of between fourteen and fifteen million dollars, covering the depots, buildings and freights along the entire line of the railroad Another estimate, by an Erie official, of the damage by the fire places the total loss at $278,000.

The Boston correspondent of the San Francisco Chronicle furnishes the following interesting statistics taken from the last annual report of the Massachusetts Labor Bureau of Statistics

The total amount of wages paid in 1870 to 277,654 laborers was $117 780,891. The establishments giving employment to this vast army of laborers were, on the average, in operation 280 days in the year The daily wages were as follows Males, over 16 years, $2 12, females, over 16 years, $1 07, and children, 68 cents The actual earnings to each man were $5 56 5, to each woman, $2 17 22 to each child, $1 50 76, and to each person, $3 08 71 The number of establishments was 13,076 The average daily wages of unskilled laborers were $1 72, annual earnings, $433 90 The annual cost of living, predicated on 5 2 persons in each family, is as follows For family, $690 78 person, $1 42 33

Thirty years ago a young man entered the city of New York in an almost penniless condition, and without a single acquaintance in the great wilderness of houses To day his name is known wherever humanity breathes It is spoken in every hamlet, in board in every city, and is as familiar to the workers in the mines as to his brother in the mills, and wherever language is known and ideas expressed the name of this penniless, unknown and unsouth lad of thirty years ago, is uttered It was John Smith.

Late mail advices denote a growing ease in the Money market of San Francisco which is rather encouraging. An exchange from that city under date of the 21st says the weather is delightful and every way propitious for the growing crop The commercial circles will no doubt enjoy any signs of ease in the money market that must necessarily be prompt in discounts, their own bills of purchase, and this they prefer to long paper which is subject to forgoods bought However, this is not the case on the closest scrutinizers and stock brokers do not do contemplate quite the ease in the money Among this class of our people who are watching the money market short maturities, day by day and swing to the steady decline in prices, the floating capital is mostly absorbed in margins and it is this class I mostly hear users who do much to obstruct the general flow of the money market

Four ships left Callao in February for Puget Sound The J A Holmes on the 17th, the Marmion and Chrystal on the 23d, and the J Fish on the 24th.

The ship Commodore arrived at Valparaiso from Port Townsend on the 1st of March, and was up for Sidney

The Commercial Herald says Latest advices from the West report an immense volume of domestic produce concentrated at forwarding points waiting for the opening of navigation the railroads being entirely inadequate to do the work Wheat, corn flour, pork, and produce in general are tending steadily upward with urgency while the requirement for cotton is extremely active, experts having been stimulated by the rise in gold The insistence of Atlantic ports is so great, and the freights paid so remunerative, that a number of regular Europe and French packet ships have accepted other charters in preference to coming here and loading with wheat The Favorita goes to Antwerp, the Archer, to the Rio de la Plata, and the Annie M Small to Havre With the opening of navigation, Western supplies of breadstuffs will come in competition with our own at the Baltic ports will also be able to forward what they have on hand, and the demand for tonnage will be increased everywhere If we want ships to make the long and expensive voyage round the Horn, we must expect to pay them a higher proportion to the value of their service and the rates obtainable for shorter and less costly trips. A ship can make four round voyages between New York and Liverpool as steam, or steamer, than she can accomplish one between Liverpool and San Francisco, and with much less wear and tear, or expense for wages, provisions, etc Farmers who hold back their grain, in expectation of greater prices, should take these facts into consideration, and estimate the competition they must meet, and the high freights they will certainly be compelled to pay."

Horrible Diseases.

How many thousands of persons, both male and female, are there who are suffering out a miserable existence from the effects of early indulgences, or from vices acquired later in life? Look at their pallid, emaciated and disfigured faces and their broken down constitutions, disqualifying them for the happiness of marriage or the enjoyment of life In this horrid situation thousands suffer until death closes the scene Let parents, guardians, and friends of those who are suffering with any of those horrible life-destroying maladies—see that they are cared for and cured before it be too late.
